The Cost-benefit of Vaccinating against Travellers’ Diarrhea - A Focus on Dukoral

Description:
Highlights of data presented at the 10th Conference of the International Society of Travel Medicine (ISTM), Vancouver, Canada

Travellers’ diarrhea is the most common health problem encountered during overseas travel, with an estimated 11 million people affected by the illness each year. For individuals travelling from an economically developed country to tropical and subtropical regions of the developing world, the attack rate of diarrhea can exceed 50% according to the destination visited and the season of travel. With increasing numbers of people visiting increasingly exotic locations and demanding more authentic travel experiences, we can expect travellers’ diarrhea to continue to be a significant problem in the future. Consequently, any intervention that reduces the occurrence of diarrheal disease amongst the travelling public is to be welcomed.

This title looks at the implementation of Dukoral to combat the problem.
