China Business Law Journal

Description:

China Business Law Journal is a fully bilingual magazine for China-focused business and legal professionals. It investigates the practical implications of legal developments, identifies the optimal legal strategies for managing complex business transactions and provides expert-written digests and analysis of new laws and regulations.

Intellectual property issues receive prominent coverage in the magazine. The timely and incisive editorial content is uniquely designed to provide China's legal and business communities with need-to-know information that is not available from any other source. We operate and publish bilingually, in simplified Chinese and English, ensuring that foreign investors, domestic enterprises and their legal advisers have access to a common source of high quality legal information and analysis.

China Business Law Journal is published 10 times a year. Unlike other traditional magazines it is 100% bilingual and both inbound and outbound deals are analyzed.

Key areas of law – mergers and acquisitions, joint ventures and wholly foreign-owned enterprises, intellectual property protection, taxation, dispute resolution, labour law, corporate finance and more – all receive the in-depth, case-based attention they deserve.

This timely and incisive editorial coverage is uniquely designed to provide China's legal and business communities with need-to-know information that is not available from any other source. We operate and publish bilingually, in simplified Chinese and English, ensuring that foreign investors, domestic enterprises and their respective legal advisers can unite around a common source of top-quality legal intelligence and analysis.
