Piping and Pipelines Assessment Guide

Description: Whether it's called "fixed equipment? (at ExxonMobil), "stationary equipment? (at Shell), or "static equipment? (in Europe), this type of equipment is the bread and butter of any process plant. Used in the petrochemical industry, pharmaceutical industry, food processing industry, paper industry, and the manufacturing process industries, stationary equipment must be kept operational and reliable for companies to maintain production and for employees to be safe from accidents. This series, the most comprehensive of its kind, uses real-life examples and time-tested rules of thumb to guide the mechanical engineer through issues of reliability and fitness-for-service.

This volume on piping and pipeline assessment is the only handbook that the mechanical or pipeline engineer needs to assess pipes and pipelines for reliability and fitness-for-service.

Provides essential insight to make informed decisions on when to run, alter, repair, monitor, or replace equipment
How to perform these type of assessments and calculations on pipelines is a 'hot' issue in the petrochemical industry at this time
There is very little information on the market right now for pipers and pipeliners with regard to pipe and pipeline fitness-for-service

Contents:

Chapter 1: An introduction to in-plant piping and pipeline fitness-for-service
Chapter 2: An introduction to engineering mechanics of piping
Chapter 3: Fitness-for-service topics of local thin areas, plain dents, dents-gouges, and cracks for piping
Chapter 4: Fitness-for-service for brittle fracture concerns
Chapter 5: Piping support systems for process plants
Chapter 6: Piping maintenance and repairs
Chapter 7: Hot tapping (pressure tapping) and freezing
Chapter 8: Pipeline fitness-for-service, repair and maintenance selected topics
