Software. Requirements of quality and ergonomics. CD-ROM

Description:
It includes 22 UNE standards that establish software quality requirements, the evaluation of ergonomics processes and the fundamental parameters, which allow that a computer application to be adapted for the function to which it is destined and adapts to the needs of users.

These standards are of interest for all the professionals involved in the definition of requirements, development, use, evaluation, support, maintenance, quality assurance, audit and acquisition of software.

The manual includes, therefore, information of utility for software developing companies, consultancies, computer departments of companies that acquire software products and even for computer engineering students.
