Summary: Heinz (H.J.) Co. Oct 05

Description: Abstract
The ratings on Chicago, Ill.-based processed food manufacturer Heinz (H.J.) Co. reflect its broad, strong portfolio of branded products, geographic diversity, and participation in the relatively stable packaged and processed food industry. These factors are somewhat offset by the company's aggressively leveraged balance sheet following several debt-financed acquisitions, and by the numerous restructuring initiatives implemented during the past few years. Heinz is a worldwide supplier of processed food products. Its major brands include Heinz, Ore-Ida, Boston Market, Smart Ones, and Classico. The company's recent acquisitions of other brands have been key to its growth. In North America, Heinz's goal is to enhance its position in existing product categories and seek margin-enhancing transactions that provide it with new capabilities and technologies....
