CRB Fundamental Market Service

Description:

"Fundamental Market Service" is a weekly publication designed to make you a more powerful trader through an understanding of the fundamental factors moving the commodity and financial futures markets.

The CRB Fundamental Market Service has stood the test of time with its status as the industry's oldest and most respected fundamental newsletter. The first edition was published on February 3, 1934.

Most traders make their trading decisions based on technical analysis and technical trading systems. However, combining both fundamental and technical gives you an even more powerful trading approach to the markets. Understanding the fundamentals helps you to gauge market direction, how far the market may move, and when the market may move.

We help you to understand these factors through our fundamental commentary and our weekly commodity and financial calendars. We analyze factors such as Fed policy, inflation, interest rates, stock market earnings and valuation, the dollar, metal and petroleum fundamentals, crop reports and global crop conditions, and livestock and soft fundamentals. We also use the Commitment of Traders to analyze how the big funds are impacting the markets.
