Global Airfreight Forwarding Market 2014-2018

Description:
About Airfreight Forwarding

Airfreight forwarders are intermediary agents that arrange shipments for industries from the manufacturer to the final point of distribution. They are usually associated with the movement of light, expensive, and perishable cargo that needs quick transportation. Having a long-term contract with major airlines along with providing consolidation services enables airfreight forwarders to secure cheaper freight rates.

The analysts forecast the Global Airfreight Forwarding market to grow at a CAGR of 2.9 percent over the period 2013-2018.

Covered in this Report
The Global Airfreight Forwarding market can be segmented by five types of services offered by forwarders: Packaging and Labeling, Documentation and Purchase Order (PO) Management, Charter Services, Transportation and Warehousing, and Value-added Service (VAS). They are increasingly offering integrated solutions, facilitating the end-to-end cargo delivery process, enabling the exporter to focus on their core business area. Customized solutions are being developed for customers from various industries, especially Pharmaceuticals, Food and Beverage, and Chemicals.
