Description: Curtain Walls

Curtain walling is a vertical building enclosure supporting only its own weight and the environmental forces acting upon it. It fulfills one of the most important roles in building: providing an external image for the building, which adds to its aesthetics. In addition, it forms a protective enclosure to protect against the harsh environment outside and to maintain the inside environment in an efficient and economical manner. It is not supposed to assist in maintaining the structural integrity of a building so, the loads are not transferred via the curtain wall to the foundations. Glass and aluminum curtain walls can be found almost everywhere in new buildings, being quite popular as cladding and exterior walls for all types of commercial, industrial, institutional and residential buildings.

The analysts forecast the Curtain Wall market in China to grow at a CAGR of 10.03 percent over the period 2013-2018.
