Global Dermatology Device Market Outlook 2020

Description: Dermatology devices are speedily gaining popularity not only due to their major role in aesthetic but also the rising cases of skin disorders such as vascular and pigmented lesions, skin cancer, acne problems and others in different regions of the world. Increasing dependence on different aesthetic procedures to achieve youthful skin is becoming a widely adopted practice in different countries. In such a scenario, enormous opportunity lies for industry participants to tap the fast growing market.

In 2014, the Global Dermatology Device market was valued at US$ 6.8 Billion in 2014 which is projected to grow at a CAGR of around 12% in till 2020. Inclining consumer awareness and acceptance rates of minimally and non-invasive treatments and increasing demand of aesthetic procedures such as body contouring, skin tightening and skin rejuvenation will drive the market in the coming years. However, on the other hand, strict government regulations and inappropriate reimbursement policies, especially in emerging economies, may hinder the growth of the dermatology device market.

Geographically, we have covered three major regions including North America, Europe, and Asia. Rising occurrence of skin related ailments along with technological advancements and higher healthcare expenditures have resulted in North America being the largest market for dermatology devices. This trend is expected to continue. The market in Asia-Pacific is anticipated to be most profitable due to highly untapped opportunities, rising patient awareness, improvement in healthcare infrastructure. Inclining disorders such as acne, dermatitis, skin warts, lesions and moles, especially in China and India, is projected to drive the Asian market.
