E-commerce IT Spending in US 2015-2019

Description: About E-commerce Software and Service Spending

Electronic commerce, commonly called e-commerce, refers to the process of buying and selling products and services over computer networks. With the changing business landscape worldwide, several industries such as traditional retailers, banks, and travel agents have been aggressively embracing e-commerce technology, which can help them operate through channels such as web portals, thereby helping them gain a competitive advantage and reach customers faster. Moreover, the market is also collaborating with mobile and social media networks to further expand the reach of customers. E-commerce software offers advanced capabilities such as searches, order management, cart management, content management, as well as marketing and reporting.

The analysts forecast the E-commerce software and service spending market in the US 2015-2019 will grow at a CAGR of 15.63% over the period 2014-2019.
