Cement Market in China 2015-2019

Description:
As cement is one of the most essential raw materials in the construction industry, the cement market is considered the backbone of the construction market. Cement is one of the vital commodities for development and falls under the likes of oil and steel. The versatile nature of cement makes it suitable for construction of houses, roads, and large-scale infrastructure projects.

China is the world's largest manufacturer of cement. It is also a major consumer and exporter of cement. The cement market in the country is one of the most important manufacturing markets. The market is, however, going through a period of deceleration in growth due to the oversupply of cement in the country and the defragmentation of the market.

The analysts forecast the cement market in China to grow at a CAGR of 1.21% over the period 2014-2019.
