Wireless Satellite and Broadcasting Newsletter

Description: The entire spectrum of wireless telecommunications has taken on a whole new complexion. Satellite once considered only for long distance point-to-point transmission, is now being considered for international paging, vehicle location, PCN and many other applications. The FCC and the ITU are considering opening new regions of the spectrum or shifting users to new frequency bands. New technology such as digital and spread spectrum will allow users to co-exist in existing bands allowing greater frequency efficiency. Digital compression will breath new life into DBS, Broadcasting, and HDTV. Developments in technology, business activity and regulation are occurring at a dizzying rate, making it essential for professionals in the field to subscribe to “Wireless-Satellite & Broadcasting.”
