Japan Water Enhancer Market-Growth, Trends and Forecast (2016 - 2021)

Description:
The Japanese market is the most mature market among the Asia-Pacific regions, almost mimicking the consumption patterns of most European and American regions. The water enhancer market here is estimated to grow from a 2014 estimate of US$$59.8 million to reach US$$130.5 million by 2020. The Japanese beverage sector also records the largest sales by volumes, thereby showing the huge demand for enhancer products.

The Japanese market is a highly consolidated one, with a present focus on the health segment. The major drivers for the industry are a declining population, lower production levels and consumer concerns about food safety. The average Japanese consumer is described as having high standards and expectations, expecting incessant product innovation with a high interest in brand and integrity of supply chain. The market although is characterized as a major and discerning one, with limited opportunities for growth and heavy competition. The entry to the market is therefore considered tough and highly specific. The flavors and energy enhancers segment are expected to do well.
