
Description: Bananas represent one of the world's most important fresh fruit commodity, at least when measured by volume and trade. They are currently produced across the world in around 150 countries with India, China, Philippines, Brazil, Ecuador and Indonesia together accounting for more than 62% of the total global production. By and large, bananas are consumed directly with a very small proportion of it being processed. Processing of bananas into banana powder provides several advantages as it increases their shelf life and decreases the problems associated with storage and transportation. Although the global banana powder market is only a fraction of the global banana market, its demand is currently showing strong growth and has wide applications in the food, feed, pharmaceutical and the cosmetics industries.

The food Industry currently represents the biggest consumer of banana powder where it is widely used in infant food, puffed food, seasonings, solid beverages, cakes, cold food, instant food, etc. The food industry is followed by the feed industry where its consumption is growing in cattle feed and pet foods. In the pharmaceutical industry, banana powder has been found to be effective in the treatment of colon diseases, sprue and other forms of carbohydrate intolerance in children. It is also effective in treating various intestinal disorders in adults. The popularity of banana powder in the cosmetics industry is also increasing worldwide.
