Global Biometric Access Control Systems Market 2015-2019

Description:
About biometrics access control systems
Biometrics access control systems are based on the behavioural and physiological characteristics of an individual that are difficult to replicate. Various biometric technologies such as voice recognition, palm geometry recognition, DNA identification, gait recognition, facial recognition, iris recognition, signature verification, and vein recognition are integrated into access control systems. Biometric access control systems ensure physical and information security.

Biometric access control systems are expected to gain traction in residential security to ensure secure access to homeowners and avoid unauthorized access to miscreants.

The report forecasts the global biometrics access control systems market to grow at a CAGR of 26.04% over the period 2014-2019.
