Description:
“South America Sauces, Dressings & Condiments Market: Type (Cooking Sauces, Table Sauces, Dips, Pickled Product, Tomato Paste & Purees); By Distribution Channel (Supermarket/Hypermarket, Convenience Store, Department Store, Discounter) - Forecast (2015-2020)”

Sauces, dressings and condiments are used in the food preparations to enhance the taste and flavor and to increase the visual appeal of the dishes. They can be used as an ingredient while cooking the food or can be served along with the dish prepared. Sauces can be served cold, hot and lukewarm, for instance mayonnaise is served cold, pesto sauce is served lukewarm and béchamel sauce is served hot. Condiments such as herbs, spices and monosodium glutamate are added to enhance the taste of the dish or to add flavor to the dish. Salad dressings such as vinaigrette, soy sauce, and mayonaise are used in European and American cultures while Asians prefer sesame oil, citrus juice and soy sauce along with salads.

South America sauces, seasonings and condiments market exhibit strong growth unlike its counterparts owing to a rising middle class and younger demographic. Higher growth is restrained owing to slowdown in South American economies and rising consumer price inflation. Cooking sauces account for about 35% market share followed closely by table sauces. Exotic herbs and spices and spice based sauces are a part of the traditional South American diet.
