High Performance Computing Market by Components Type (Servers, Storage, Networking Devices, & Software), Services, Deployment Type, Server Price Band, Vertical, & Region - Global Forecast to 2020

Description:
“Higher computational power drives the High Performance Computing (HPC) market”
The HPC market is expected to grow at a CAGR of 5.45% during 2015-2020. The emergence of big data has increased the demand for systems that can handle data intensive workload. HPC clusters are systems that can easily handle vast amount of data and extensively support high performance data analysis. The improved data collection technology provides lively images for simulations, medical, life science, video rendering, and such other applications. All these applications require higher processing power and speed for data analysis and results. Better scans, HDTV, multi-layer scans, and enhanced information gathering abilities all adds to the requirement of more CPUs and quicker storage solutions that is delivered through HPC and helps in driving the market.

“The market in Asia-Pacific (APAC) is expected to witness the highest market growth”
The market in APAC is in the growth phase and is the fastest-growing region for the global HPC market. This is mainly attributed to the growing focus of the market players to address the demands of higher processing power with reliable and quicker response time. On the other hand, Middle East and Africa (MEA) is aiming toward the growth phase while Latin America is still in the introductory phase in terms of adoption of HPC solutions.

“HPC servers to gain maximum market share during the forecast period”
HPC servers market is estimated to contribute the largest market share in terms of components type. Storage, networking devices, and software solutions are also seen with higher prospects in coming years. Moreover, the services market is estimated to have great opportunities and projected to grow at a high CAGR in the next five years.
