North America Active & Passive Fire Protection Systems Market By Application, By Service, By Type, By Vertical, By Geography - Analysis And Forecast To 2020

Description:

"North America Active & Passive Fire Protection Systems Market By Application (Commercial, Industrial, Infrastructural, Residential), By Service (Engineering Service, Installation & Design, Service & Maintenance, Managed Service), By Type, By Vertical, By Geography - Analysis And Forecast To 2020"

Fire protection is a practice of uninterrupted risk management through which risks to public and private infrastructures can be predicted and reduced. Efficient fire protection management system involves combined efforts of federal custodians and tenants, private sector building owners, Fire Protection Program (FPP) within the Labor Program, and local fire service agencies. As there is a risk of increased hazards caused by fire accidents, the government agencies across different regions are taking several measures to reduce the losses caused by fire incidents. Policies and regulations imposed by the concerned governments for fire safety are usually region specific and hence, vary from place to place. They are meant to ensure safety of life and the protection to property.

The overall fire protection systems market comprises active and passive fire protection systems. The active fire protection systems need to be activated either mechanically or electronically in the event of a fire. These systems require a certain degree of motion and response to work. However, the passive fire protection systems secure building structures against breakdown and hence, prevent fire from spreading to different parts of the building frame. These systems are an integral part of building construction and focus on the structural fire protection and fire safety in the buildings. They usually refer to fire-resistant walls & glass, floors, doors, and ceilings. These systems protect critical structures, such as load bearing columns and beams from collapsing prematurely during fire accidents. The main motive of the passive fire protection systems is to prevent or slow down the spread of fire from its origin to the other parts of the building.

The key enterprises in the market offer services, such as planning and system design, installation and project management, system integration, maintenance, and managed services. The key players include Tyco International Ltd., Honeywell International, Inc., and Siemens AG, among others, who provide a wide range of fire protection solutions for different verticals of the fire protection systems market.

Objectives Of The Study

- To identify market statistics with detailed classifications, in terms of revenues
- To identify emerging trends and opportunities in the North American fire protection systems market
- To analyze the market dynamics that describe factors currently driving or restraining the growth of the North American market
- To provide a detailed segmentation of the North American fire protection systems market, on the basis of industry vertical, component, service, and geography
- To provide a detailed comparison between major states of the United States, on the basis of four regions: south, mid-west, northeast, and west
- To illustrate the segmentation, analysis, and forecast of the main geographies to present an overall view of the market
- To analyze the future of the North American market and market opportunities till 2020
- To provide a comprehensive competitive landscape of the market, as well as to identify the key market players with respect to market size and market share
- To track and analyze the competitive developments such as vendor share analysis, new product
