Russia Commercial Vehicle Market By Vehicle Type (Truck, Bus & Van), Competition Forecast and Opportunities, 2011-2021

Description: Economic and political uncertainty in Russia have hindered growth of commercial vehicle market over the last five years. Western sanctions imposed on Russia over Ukraine crisis led to a steep decline in the country's commercial vehicle market.

Despite these adversities and restriction on fund inflows from the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (EBRD), Russia is now following Public-Private Partnership (PPP) model to finance infrastructure projects in the country. This move is expected to induce a positive impact on the commercial vehicle market in the country over the next five years.

Moreover, the country is expected to witness higher economic as well as political stability post mid-2016, with government taking various initiatives to resolve issues posed by Western sanctions. Consequently, Russia commercial vehicle market is expected to growth during the forecast period.

According to the report, "Russia Commercial Vehicle Market By Vehicle Type, Competition Forecast and Opportunities, 2011-2021", the country's commercial vehicle market is projected to surpass $ 6 billion by 2021. Initiatives and subsidies provided by the government of Russia to promote adoption of alternate fuels such as natural gas and electric power, coupled with rapid infrastructure development are expected to positively influence the commercial vehicle market in the country during 2016-2021.

In 2015, truck segment dominated the country's commercial vehicle market, followed by the bus and van segments. Truck segment is forecast to continue its dominance in Russia commercial vehicle market on account of extensive use of trucks in logistics industry. KAMAZ, GAZ and URAL are the largest players operating in Russia commercial vehicle market, and these three players cumulatively accounted for a market share of around 70% in 2015.
