Global Aluminum Conductors Market 2017-2021

Description: About Aluminum Conductors

Aluminum conductors are produced through electrolytic refining of aluminum. Generally, these conductors contain about 99.5% of aluminum and are made up of one or more strands of aluminum wire depending on the end-use application requirement. These conductors are primarily used in the T&D sector for various applications such as overhead line applications. Aluminum conductors are known for their tensile strength, corrosion resistance, and shock proof properties. These conductors are widely used in urban areas for short space applications.

The analysts forecast the global aluminum conductors market to grow at a CAGR of 2.63% during the period 2017-2021.
