
Description: Shrimps are one of the most common and popular types of seafood consumed worldwide. The demand of shrimps has been high due to their nutritional value and health benefits as they are low in fat, high in protein and a moderate source of omega-3 fatty acids. The trend towards consumption of healthy and low-fat foods and the demand for marine proteins in both developed and developing countries are currently driving the growth of the shrimp market. One of the biggest challenges faced by this market in the last decade was the emergence of the EMS disease in China in 2009. This significantly impacted the shrimp markets in China, Thailand, Vietnam and Mexico. The shrimp market, however, has recovered in the last few years with global production levels reaching 4.5 Million Metric tons in 2016.

“Shrimp Market: Global Industry Trends, Share, Size, Growth, Opportunity and Forecast 2017-2022” has segmented the shrimp market on the basis of species, size and region. Based on species, the market is segmented into Penaeus Vannamei (or White-leg shrimp), Penaeus Monodon (or Black Tiger Shrimp) and Macrobrachium Rosenbergii. On the basis of sizes available, the market has been categorized into various segments such as 70. Region-wise, China represented the largest market in terms of production. China was followed by Vietnam, India, Indonesia, Ecuador and Thailand.
