Agile Project Management Advisory Service

Description:
Agile Project Management Advisory Service will provide you with strategic advice that will help you implement agile approaches for successful software development and project management.

Directed by Jim Highsmith, the service explores the unique benefits of each of the agile approaches -- Extreme Programming, Adaptive Software Development, Crystal Light, Lean Development, Dynamic Systems Development Method, Scrum -- and helps you identify what types of projects are suitable for each approach.

Learn how these new agile approaches can help you achieve higher quality, greater flexibility, faster return on investment, and greater predictability for your software development and project management efforts.

Your service includes:

- Executive Reports
  Each month, you'll receive an in-depth Executive Report, written by one of the top thinkers in project management, agile software development, and extreme programming - providing you with tools for transferring knowledge throughout your development groups.

- Executive Summaries
  Each monthly Executive Report is accompanied by a fast-reading Executive Summary, providing you and your project managers with a quick-reading synopsis that highlights the key points made in the Executive Report.

- Executive Updates
  Twice-monthly Executive Updates provide insight into the development challenges organizations like yours are facing, and include analysis of exclusive Cutter Consortium survey data on project management, risk management, software testing, software quality, requirements management, and more.

- E-Mail Advisors
  Receive solid advice each week from Jim Highsmith, Rob Thomsett, and Ken Schwaber on how your organization can implement successful approaches to agile project management and software development.
