Federal Regulatory Training Requirements Compliance Guide

Description: The Regulatory Training Requirements Compliance Guide helps users establish training programs that meet the compliance requirements governing various industries and organizations. It comprises two major sections. The first provides a system for managing all applicable environmental, health and safety and DOT training programs, and the second offers detailed summaries of federal regulatory training requirements. Regulatory codes covered include 40 CFR (Environmental), 29 CFR (Occupational Health and Safety), and 49 CFR (Transportation).

The Regulatory Training Requirements Compliance Guide is an indispensable resource for those who are designing, managing, directing, or implementing training programs.

Benefits

- Offers step-by-step summaries and explanations in an easy-to-read format that assist in ensuring compliance with Code of Federal Regulations environmental, health and safety, and transport training requirements
- Summarizes training requirements of all three areas in one unified format, and demonstrates the degree of overlap among them
- Enables the user to:
  - Develop a successful program to identify all training requirements that apply
  - Reduce long-term training costs
  - Minimize the risk of accidents and improve emergency response effectiveness through better training
  - Increase employee competence in hazardous circumstances
  - Make training decisions based on regulatory requirements as well as company policy and principles
  - Standardize presentation of material
  - Ensure that training is effective by incorporating an evaluation/feedback process
  - Provide documentation for a fully accountable program
  - Prevent redundancies in training
- Field-tested by STC's expert auditors
