Electronic Healthcare

Description: ElectronicHealthcare explores models, practices and products for e-health in the Canadian healthcare system as well as abroad. Its stated objective is to document best practice in health service delivery and policy development.

Excellence is achieved through constant innovation, motivated people and inspired leadership at all levels of the organization.

ElectronicHealthcare would be of benefit to administrators, academics, insurers, suppliers and policy pundits. It provides readers with ideas, analysis, policies and best practices that have been subject to independent reviews.

ElectronicHealthcare is a part of wider healthcare series which produces research, reports, reviews, commentaries and news from and for academics, scientists, clinicians, policymakers, administrators and pundits. The publications are concerned with enabling excellence in wellness and care provision. They promote exchanges between researchers, health professionals, policy makers and other stakeholders that yield innovative and effective healthcare ideas, policies and practices, in order to increase interdisciplinary capacity among researchers, policy makers, professionals, and corporate and institutional leaders.

Articles are updated on a continual basis.
