Description:

Follow the Grants Money - A Comprehensive Guide to Research Funding from OpenGrants

The team at OpenGrants is providing a "first of a kind" grants dataset.

This report will provide global transparency to research funded for Mental Health - based on models of NIH definitions for those topic areas.

Using these models, we will provide you with 5 years of Mental Health Grant Funding data from the top global funders of Science Research - representing over 80 different funding organizations worldwide.

Which global funders are providing the most resources in Mental Health?
Which institutions are receiving the most awards?
Which investigators are leading the field in new and current funding/projects?
What funds have been targeted in this field for future years (projects won in 2013, 2014 which will fund for the next 2-3 years)

This is the most forward-looking and current research data source on Mental Health.

Funding includes 5 years of data from the major science and biomedical funders in Europe, North America, and Australia.
